SENATE KILLS PRIMARY LAW

ORTERIC IN PORT | CHOLERA FIGHT

SENATE HURRIES HEALTH BILL'S PASSAGE

Cecil Brown Criticizes County and Hewitt Health Board.

POLITICS DECLARED TO BE PREDOMINATING FORCE

New Measures Will Centralize Power In Hands of Territorial Officials.

CHOLERA SITUATION.

No new cases reported. Board of Health demolishes shop to which fatal infection was traced. All poi factories except Kalihiki closed. Senate hurries bills centralizing in Territorial authorities the enforcing of sanitary regulations. Republican executive committee to take up matter of efficiency in County health department. U. S. Marine Hospital service to use discretion in regulating port. No port quarantine yet. Steamer passengers under no restrictions.

The Territorial Senate took quick action this morning on the health measures now pending before it, approving three bills on second reading without reference to committee and passing the statement of nuisance bill on third reading, all tending to centralize health control power in the hands of the Territorial Board of Health. In moving for the passage on third reading of Senate Bill 122, empowering the health department to proceed against nuisances dangerous to the health of the community, Senator Cecil Brown declared that the greatest mistake the Legislature had ever made was in turning over absolute power in health matters to the supervisors of the city and county of Honolulu.

"If we do not want the United States government to step in here and cause the greatest plagues we have ever had," said Senator Brown, "we had better correct the mistake now. There is nothing but politics in it from top to bottom, and the health of the community is something that should not be knocked about at the whim of anyone. It should be above politics."

Senator Hewitt stated that he was not defending the city and county, but declared:

"I wish to go on record as saying that the Board of Health inspection in outside districts is a farce and that there has been too much politics by those officials. I do not oppose the bill."

The bill was passed with a unanimous vote.

Senate Bill No. 29 was taken up and passed on second reading without reference to committee.

A memorandum on the aims of the bill was read by Senator Chillingworth as follows:

"The purpose of the bill is to give the Territorial Board of Health powers over all health matters, including those specifically turned over to the counties and city and county and by making the powers of the counties and city and county concurrent with those of the Territorial Board of Health, except as to infectious and contagious diseases."

Immigrant Ship Gets Here With 1495 Europeans

Fourteen hundred and ninety-five Spanish and Portuguese men, women and children are now added to the total population of the Territory of Hawaii with the arrival of the new British freighter Orteric, this morning.

This number may suffer a slight reduction by the time that Inspector in Charge of Immigration Raymond C. Brown, and his corps of assistants complete their work of making an examination of the newly arrived immigrants, who have been brought here at the instance of the Territorial Board of Immigration.

Fifteen hundred and fifty-two souls embarked at the three ports of call, before the long voyage to the Hawaiian Islands was really begun.

Deaths stalked among the people who would come out a new life and fortune in a new world. At the time the vessel came to anchor off the port of Honolulu this morning, 57 children had passed away. Not one of the little ones was over eight years old.

The Grim Reaper was not alone permitted to follow the Orteric. The Stock landed on board on many occasions and during the voyage fourteen births were recorded by Dr. John Pugh. Among the arrivals not on the passenger manifest were a pair of twins who lived but a few days after first seeing the light of day.

Orteric an Early Arrival.

Old Sol had barely made his appearance over the hills when with the lifting of the haze that overspread the sea, was sighted the big black hulled freight steamer surmounted by yellow colored cabins and funnel.

The vessel came to anchor at the quarantine ground before six o'clock. The steamer remained outside until nine-thirty, when Captain Findlay was given permission to raise his main hook and steam to the berth assigned the Orteric at the channel wharf.

The officers endeavored to get in touch with the islands for the past two nights with the wireless equipment but recently installed. For some reason or other the apparatus failed to send, though it is claimed that messages exchanged between various quarantine stations were quickly picked up while at sea. The epidemic time of the vessel was in every way satisfactory and the Orteric came within sight of the islands on regular schedule.

Immigrants Appear to be Agriculturalists.

The Orteric passengers with but few exceptions appear to come from agricultural communities of Portugal and Spain.

When seen on board this morning, several Spaniards claimed that the general standard before six o'clock, the number of nine hundred or more were recruited from the ranks of the great agricultural districts of Spain. Many families expressed themselves as familiar with sugar cane growing. Some were found who had spent some years in Cuban estates. The people from whom the Spaniards are drawn are said to be a class that has been and are at present much sought after by the Cuban sugar planter. In enlisting such persons as found in the Orteric, the grave danger of introducing an element from the popular cities of Spain has been greatly eliminated. All were more than anxious to gain the land after the nearly two months spent on the deep.

Measles Carried Off Many Children.

Five days after leaving Gibraltar, the last port of call for immigrants an epidemic of measles broke out among the little people of which there are many hundreds on board the steamer. Dr. Pugh and his assistants had their hands full in the care of the sick and ailing. The epidemic did not assume serious proportions until the Orteric had cleared Punahele and had passed through the Straits of Magellan and colder weather was then encountered. As the vessel breasted the cold winds from the North, the disease spread with lightening rapidity among the children. Attempts were made to segregate the people as far as was possible in a crowded ship. An improvised isolation hospital was fitted up in the after part of the vessel. This was soon filled to overflowing with the sick. After leaving Magellan's forbidding promontories, the harrowing number of deaths took place until the islands were sighted, when one child died early this morning.

Those who succumbed were in all cases weaklings and of tender age. Save the measles and illness attendant on child birth, the general health of the company was declared as good.

The entire staff of medical officers from the Federal quarantine station visited the Orteric at an early hour this morning. The boarding party included Dr. Carl Ramus, Chief quarantine officer, Drs. Marshall, Gillespie and James and Mrs. Smith, attendant at the quarantine station.

Cooperating with the local medical men were Dr. John Pugh and his assistants who accompanied the immigrants. The company was passed without any unnecessary delay, though there are several cases that will warrant a more careful investigation before the people are permitted to land. These will be taken to the Federal quarantine station for observation and treatment.

Weather Was Favorable.

The Orteric sailed from London on February 16th and picked up her first lot of passengers at Oporto, taking 205 people there. The vessel then proceeded to Lisbon where on February 22nd, 250 people were embarked. The Orteric then rounded the Spanish main and made her next stop at Gibraltar where a total of 950 passengers were taken on board. The steamer met with fair weather in steaming down the coast of South America and called at Punahele on March 19th. Captain Findlay there received orders, took on some supplies including a band of sixty head sheep, and sailed the following day through the Straits of Magellan, and thence into the broad expanse of the Pacific. What ever disagreeable weather met with on the trip came as the vessel voyaged through the Western Ocean.

Orteric Logged Fair Trip.

"We logged an average of 11.6 knots on the entire voyage," stated Captain Findlay this morning "when seated in his splendidly fitted up quarters on the bridge of the fine new steamer. We saw nothing in the way of a sail or a column of smoke after leaving the Straits. In passing through Magellan one large steamer kept company for some hours. We were twenty-three days in making Punahele."

JUDGE CLEMONS IS PROTESTED

JUDGE CLEMONS, U. S. District Attorney, today filed a protest with U. S. District Attorney Breckons against Federal Judge Clemons sitting in the case. The protest, which was foreseen several days ago by the Bulletin, is based on the ground that before his appointment to the Federal bench Judge Clemons was a member of the law firm of Thompson, Clemons & Wilder, which represented some of the interests.

The protest is signed by the Hawaiian Trust Company, Anna C. M. Cooke, office supply company, Kinney, Ballou, Promer & Anderson, and Bank of Hawaii.

The expected reapportionment was sent to the Legislature this morning by Governor Proctor. The message is accompanied by the citizenship and alien statistics already published.

Senate Vote Tables Direct Primary Bill

FORTY-NINTH DAY.

The direct primary bill was killed in the Territorial Senate this morning by a vote of ten to four, the measure being laid on the table, no member of the upper house favoring its passage being able to secure an opportunity to defend the bill.

The bill was tabled on the following vote:

Ayes—Baker, John Brown, Fairchild, Hewitt, Kalamia, Makokau, Pali, Quinn, Robinson and Knudsen.

Noes—Cecil Brown, Chillingworth, Judd and Kalelepa.

The motion to table the bill was made by Senator Fairchild of Kauai. "I want to say as a Republican," declared Fairchild, "that I am not in favor of this bill. It does not carry out the intent of its supporters in its present form and will serve no purpose at all. It is like the man who had a fit, the trouble with his wife and invited his mother-in-law into his home to placate matters, only to discover later that his troubles were doubled instead of lessened.

"The whole thing is a mistake, and I move that it be tabled," concluded the Senator from Kauai.

Senator Chillingworth called for an aye and no vote, with the result that the measure was tabled by a majority of ten to four.

Before Fairchild's motion was made, Senator Makokau stated that he thought the measure would complicate the election laws and by some possible legal construction be extended to the other islands, where it was certainly not wanted.

Chillingworth was ready to explain all of its provisions, but explanations were apparently not wanted and the vote was then taken.

As amended by the Senate judiciary committee, the direct primary bill would have applied only to the city and county officials.

Beretan had been abandoned.

"What they are trying to do," said one business man this morning, "is to make a lane out of Union street. It is of the utmost importance that the people should take notice of what is going on and make up their minds whether they are to have the business center of the growing and greater Honolulu a clogged up maze of alleys. Some years ago the Territorial government could have had the right of way for Bishop street through from Merchant to Queen street, for one dollar. They waited and haggled and neased the thing until the other day twenty thousand dollars of taxpayers' money was spent for that same right of way."

"Now the proposal is made to make a lane of Union street that is now 'crooked' than all get-out."

"The people who believe in the future of Honolulu ought to wake up."

WODEHOUSE OUT; NEW SUPT.

E. A. Wodehouse has resigned as Superintendent of Immigration as he leaves today on the Siberia for a trip to England and the continent. He retains his membership on the Board of Immigration.

It may be that under the new law Dr. Victor S. Clark will be named as the Superintendent of Immigration.

Guild succeeds Rockhill at St. Petersburg.

CRAIG AGREES TO QUIT GETTING LABORERS

Agent Declares His Activities For Emigrants Are Over Now.

MANY LEGAL TROUBLES WILL KEEP HIM BUSY

Pending Court Cases to Occupy His Time—Senator Left Hawaii For Good, Is Evident.

Frank B. Craig, the labor agent recruiter whose activities stirred the Territory, and resulted in the passage of a half-a-dozen laws against emigrant agents by the legislature, brought down the steamship Senator and made some exciting local history when the Senator took 120 men and boys away from the islands a few days ago, has quit. He has thrown up his hands, informed the Planters' Association that he is through, and with the exception of sending off a few men already signed up, will not operate any more in the Territory.

Craig is under a grand jury indictment, has a case pending against him in the District Court, injunction proceedings to restrain him have been brought, and the constitutionality of the emigrant recruiting laws has been taken up to the Supreme Court. He is thus mixed up with most of the legal powers of the land, together with his sub-agents and several persons charged with aiding and abetting the recruiters.

Quits Recruiting.

Craig has informed the planters, it is stated, that he has not recruited any laborers since the Senator sailed and furthermore that he will not recruit any more. This in itself is taken as sufficient proof that the Senator has left the islands for good. Craig further denies that he has anything to do with the recruiting reported from Hilo, and it is fairly sure that if any are going on there, it is by agents who are responsible and have no means of fulfilling their promises.

Some seventy-five Filipinos, Portuguese and Porto Ricans have been booked by Craig for passage on the Siberia and these will go under sudden quarantine restrictions should hold them. Then Craig says that he is through and his activities will be transferred elsewhere.

HOUSE DOWN TO EARNEST LABOR

Prospect of Extra Session Causes Legislators to Dig Harder.

FORTY-NINTH DAY.

Facing the prospect of an extra session, the House got down to real work yesterday afternoon and this morning, and will sit at night, it is stated, in order to clean up business if it is evident that an extra session is coming.

The reapportionment fight, if it becomes as serious as is expected, will stop up routine work and make the extra session necessary. This morning's developments make it doubtful as to whether Hawaii county will or will not oppose the reapportionment. Hawaii county does not lose representation, and there is a possibility that its delegation in the House may side with the Oahu delegation, in which case the two would have equal control with twenty votes. It is conceded that Kauai and Maui will oppose the reapportionment, but all admit that reapportionment is the only result in the end.
